Dalal Alhajji is student editor of BMJ Case Reports.

Dalal Alhajji is a 2014 graduate from the Boston University Henry M Goldman School of Dental Medicine. She completed an Advanced Education in General Dentistry residency at the Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, OH, and is currently pursuing her Master of Science Degree in Oral Medicine. Ever since 2010 Dalal has found herself committed to the belief that health, and oral health in particular, is a human right, leading her to foster a strong community bound by engaging herself regularly in events meant to improve and achieve equity in oral health care. As a freshman in dental school, she volunteered to carry out oral cancer screenings during the Day of Dignity, an initiative of the non-profit organization Islamic Relief USA, which aims to provide support to the underserved population regardless of colour, race, gender or creed.

Throughout dental school, she regularly volunteered at a sanctuary for poor and homeless women in Boston, MA to assess and address the oral health concerns of the women in need. In addition to that, Dalal collaborated in a community health centre in Dorchester, MA, providing affordable dental care for the underserved population. She further pursued her passion for health-related activism when she moved to Cleveland, OH and volunteered to provide free dental care on a monthly basis at the Care Alliance Health Centre.
